

Secrets

A dog likes rolling in feces hiding his predator scent for survival of his species

A sly fox likes to eat chicken but will kill all in the shed do they naturally plan ahead

No matter how well people tell lies they shed their disguise

their secrets hide secrets abide

No matter how well people realities reshape secrets escape

The dog and fox do not know they are obeying a code

Man with ability to think blinds himself to instinct

Love and respect is shown for the dog and clever fox owe we less to people unknown
